

Food and Politics Have Been Like Peas in a Pod, 1876 to the Present

Treating voters to food and drink in exchange for their vote on Election Day has a long history. In a virtual talk, Dr. Frederick Douglass Opie, author and professor of history and foodways at Babson College, shares the historic relationship between food, drink, and politics and regional differences across the United States.

★ Click here to attend this livestreamed event.

For more information, email dean.aw@lynchburg.edu.

Thursday
Oct. 15, 2020
7 p.m.

Sponsored by the
John M. Turner Lecture in the Humanities at University of Lynchburg