Featured Westover: Anna Destino

Anna Destino is a Senior Psychology major from Weaverville, North Carolina. After she graduates this spring, Anna will be attending graduate school at Ithaca college to get a Masters in Occupational Therapy.

Anna is a part of the University of Lynchburg Club soccer team, and enjoys knitting, spending time outside, and leading a Bible study. She chose to study Psychology because of the way that peoples' consciousness and behavior shape their interactions and everyday life.

Something that Anna likes about Westover is that the Gen Ed classes are interdisciplinary, which shows how different fields are interconnected. She feels that Westover has helped her make connections beyond the classroom as well as make friends with her peers.

Ethics in Alabama

AN EXPLORATION IN BIOETHICS

At 9:30 pm last night, Dr. Kicklighter and a group of 7 students returned from their 12 hour journey to Mobile, Alabama where they had competed in the University of Southern Alabama's National Bioethics bowl.

In this competition, the UL ethics bowl team debated with other schools from across the nation about the ethics of modern medical topics. They did well, winning their first 3 rounds and beating Bowling Green and Georgetown. They made it to the semi-final, but lost to the winning team. The team expressed how the Bioethics aspect changed the feel of the tournament and required more research in their preliminary practices.

The Westover community welcomes home their weekend travelers, and congratulates Westover students Bea Kelly-Russo, Jack Schroder, Richard Brewster, Nicole Freewalt, and Mary King for their continued commitment to exploring ethical questions and representing the University of Lynchburg well.
